To whom it may concern,

I have read where there is possibly some thought about preventing retirees from producing income during their retirement years. I have been using the covered call strategy in my portfolio for a few years now and have been planning on continuing this strategy for many more years during my retirement years to supplement my income. This is a very conservative strategy and my yields have been over 10% for 5 consecutive years. Why would you ever consider eliminating this? Please reconsider this before you act.
